POLITICAL IMAGINATION LABORATORIES

- Which visions animate contemporary activism?
- How to visualize or to contextualize the political imagination of contemporary social movements?
- How to uncover those utopian aspirations, strategic and/or ideological horizons that too often pass implicitly, silently or invisibly?

Inspired by both visual and ethnographic fieldwork, our Political Imagination Laboratories aim to explore and interrogate the shifting political imagination of contemporary social movements. Each “Lab” invites anthropologists, filmmakers and activists to a mix of film screenings, roundtable discussions and work-in-progress expositions. These experimental events have been organized by the team of the “Peasant Activism Project”, in cooperation with the network “Anthropology and Social Movements” of the European Association of Social Movements (EASA).

For those who engage with questions of social justice in their fieldwork and/or qualitative research, questions related to the identity and the role of the researcher remain inescapable. Recently, the figure of the witness has been presented as one of the possible solutions to the dilemmas of knowledge, power and ontology in ethnographic and qualitative fieldwork. Compared to other possible identities - such as “expert” or “reporter” - the witness preserves independence and entails authority. The witness aims to be a truthful observer, while being conscious about its own limits of knowledge, its own positioning and its own responsibilities.

The third Political Imagination Laboratory invites those who carry out fieldwork related to questions of social justice and/or activism (anthropologists, filmmakers, social scientists) to focus on methodological and ontological aspects of their research:

What can be understood? What not? What can be said? What not? When and how should we intervene? In how far do we have an obligation to our interlocutors and other actors in as well as outside the field? How do we situate ourselves with regard to moral positions (between cultural relativism and universalism)? How does the relation with our field partners and possible resulting emotional entanglements (e.g., the negotiation of empathy vs. sympathy) influence our way of representing them and of acting in the field?
